More than a route. A way into the mountains.

Kosovo's stretch of the Via Dinarica is a compact, high-impact journey across wild alpine ground few visitors reach. In five days you cover about 45 km (28 miles), sleep in locally owned mountain guesthouses, and stand on Gjeravica—Kosovo's rooftop at 2,656 m.

This segment sits on the great transnational Via Dinarica corridor that runs from Albania toward Slovenia. Here the walking mixes kinder valley paths with steeper climbs, open saddles, karst drama and long valley vistas.

Expect varied terrain, living village culture and hosts who treat guests like neighbours. Built for hikers (and outdoor travellers) who want a genuine Balkan week without a longer multi-country commit.
